During stormy summer, officials try to keep your O'Hare flights on time

Chicago Tribune

This year's weather has been among the worst in a decade for air travel in the U.S., aviation authorities say, with the most volatile period possibly still ahead as the summer thunderstorm season is underway.

In June, 15 percent of flights by all airlines at O'Hare were delayed because of bad weather, up from 3 to 6 percent over the previous two Junes, according to calculations that United Airlines provided to the Tribune, based on U.S. Department of Transportation statistics that will be publicly released in August.

Total delays at the airport haven't been this bad since before a new runway opened in late 2008, airline officials said.

"It has just been thunderstorm after thunderstorm rolling through," said Glen Martin, who oversees air traffic control in the central U.S. for the Federal Aviation Administration. "We are hoping it gets better over the next three or four months."

They're hoping for—but not counting on—improvements. Computer software upgrades will help controllers more equitably spread delays throughout the nation's airspace, rather than overpenalizing O'Hare by too frequently halting traffic to and from the

MAJOR AIRPORT PERFORMANCE RANKINGS

January-May 2013

Unseasonably turbulant weather may have contributed to O'Hare and Midway poor on-time arrival and departure percentages among the 29 busiest U.S. airports. Hovever, the most time spent waiting for a flight to arrive or depart was in the Newark Liberty International Airport.

WORST 2013 ON-TIME PERCENTAGES FLIGHT CANCELLED DUE TO WEATHER ARRIVALS DEPARTURE O'HARE Newark, N.J. Chicago (O'Hare) 2013: 55.31% 68.26% Newark, N.J. airport—with the dreaded "ground stop"—until the weather clears, officials said.

"In the past, the thinking was it was easier to shut off O'Hare and take pressure off the whole system because O'Hare handles so much traffic," Martin said.

The airlines also have pledged to do a better job communicating with passengers about flight delays so that even if trips take much longer to complete, the information is put out there as early as possible.

In Chicago, the airlines have been adding flights at O'Hare and Midway. Both can handle more flights on blue-sky days when the air is relatively calm and visibility is good, according to the FAA. The problem is that the weather hasn't cooperated.

From January through spring, O'Hare has been at the bottom of government rankings for on-time departures and arrivals.

Departures at Midway also have been prone to frequent delays, while arrivals rank in the middle of the pack among the nation's busiest airports.

The share of delayed flights because of bad weather has increased. In April and May at O'Hare, about 65 percent of delay minutes were attributed to weather, up from 29 percent in April 2012 and 58 percent in May 2012, according to the U.S. Bureau of Transportation Statistics.

"This is one of the worst years I have seen in the last decade. The storms, they come wave after wave and they won't go away," said Bob Flynn, FAA air traffic manager at O'Hare tower.

Lessons from Trayvon Martin

I went to Nelly's show Saturday at North Avenue Beach. He played the hits, the weather was great, and I couldn't stop smiling, Afterward, folks came over to my place and we whipped up some dinner.

While I was washing dishes and listening to music, my friend let out a scream. Or maybe it was a yell. I don't really remember, mostly because of what came next.

"Holy [bleep]!" she said. "George Zimmerman was found not guilty!"

I yelled, I swore, I ignored a call from my mom because I couldn't face her at that moment, even if she couldn't see me.

It got quiet. See, I was the only black person in the room. Everyone was looking at me. My friend tried to hug me. It was awkward.

What was I supposed to do? Or say? A boy who easily could have been me is dead, and the guy who killed him is moonwalking home. I cut my finger on a knife. "Get Your Roll On" by the Big Tymers was pumping in the background.

This trial has taught me a lot about people. There are folks who believe Trayvon Martin deserved what happened to him and will kindly inform you of that fact. There are people who will abstain from commenting because they fear public conversation on controversial issues. Some people just don't care because it had nothing to do with their day-to-day lives.

I can never explain to you what being a black man in America is like. The feeling of the cop car doing an extra lap when you're sitting on the stoop of your own home. The woman at the Southport CTA station who clutches her purse when she sees you like it's going to fly away. The smug expression on the face of the guy who calls you the N-word because he knows that his previous attempts to provoke you were unsuccessful and that it's his trump card. The cabdriver who makes you get out because he doesn't "trust people like you to have cards that work." Seeing black kids massacred by other black kids because society gave up on them. Being told in words and actions that you deserve all of it.

In situations like this, we like to ask ourselves: What can we do to change things? How can we mend the lack of education and understanding that leads to situations like this?

Here's a start: Be aware that these kinds of behaviors are out there. Don't shy away from them. Preaching to the choir doesn't fix anything. Engage the detractors, the racists and the uninformed in conversation and debate. Don't allow ignorance to continue to spread because you don't want to make a party awkward for a few minutes.

Remember that Oscar Grant, Emmett Till and Trayvon Martin aren't the only three. The other kids matter too, even if we never learn their names. All of them.

It's not an overnight solution, but it's a lot better than what we have right now. ERNEST WILKINS IS CHICAGO'S WINGMAN.

CHICAGO'S PASTORS SAY TRIAL'S OUTCOME DEMORALIZES CONGREGANTS

Chicago Tribune

Saturday night, the Rev. Otis Moss III's 12-year-old son asked him a question that he said pierced his heart and soul.

"Daddy, am I next?"

A day after George Zimmerman was cleared of murder charges in the 2012 shooting death of Trayvon Martin, 17, Moss told the congregation at Trinity United Church of Christ on the South Side about his son's reaction to the south Florida jury's verdict.

Moss and religious leaders throughout Chicago urged their members Sunday to channel their anger into constructive social change.

"Many are disappointed today; we are devastated from what we like to call a punch in the mouth by the judicial system," said Ira Acree, a pastor who hosted a gathering of religious leaders Sunday at Greater St. John Bible Church in North Austin. "We will fight back. Not with violence but with our voice. With discipline, with dignity and with restraint."

Officials across the country had braced for riots and other protests like the ones that raged in the immediate aftermath of Martin's death. Aside from a small, peaceful demonstration downtown, most public reaction to the verdict in Chicago was expressed on stoops and in church pews.

Rallies at Daley Plaza on Saturday and Sunday drew protesters from across the city.

"I have a Trayvon," said Linda Daniel, who is black and a teacher from Hyde Park. "My granddaughter lives in a completely white community. She could be another Trayvon Martin."

"I'm appalled. I'm disgusted to be an American at this moment," she said.

The verdict was a travesty, said the Rev. Michael Pfleger, pastor at St. Sabina Catholic Church in Gresham. But, he said, "we must not let injustice pull us to the low ground of violence ever."

Pastor Ira Acree of Greater St. John Bible Church hosted a gathering of religious leaders and planned to participate in a conference call with civil rights leaders. CHUCK BERMAN/TRIBUNE

"People are tremendously angry," said Marshall Hatch, pastor at New Mount Pilgrim Missionary Baptist Church in West Garfield Park. "But even more, what we found in our churches today: fear."

Many in the African-American community said Martin's killing seemed to excuse killing a black man just because he "looks suspicious."

"That's really what gets people upset: The message that it sends that our lives are not being valued," said Bernard Jakes, a pastor at West Point Missionary Baptist Church on

We will fight back. Not with violence but with our voice. With discipline, with dignity and with restraint."

-Ira Acree, pastor at Greater St. John Bible Church the South Side who was among about a dozen religious leaders who gathered at Acree's church to discuss the verdict.

"It is of course just beyond belief to many that an unarmed teenager somehow ends up being the one on trial and having to prove that he himself is no threat to anyone," Hatch said at a news conference at the church.

Ministers and civil rights leaders from more than 100 cities planned to hold a conference call Sunday night to discuss ways to mobilize around the Zimmerman verdict, Acree said. One idea is to hold prayer vigils outside federal courthouses.

It wasn't just pastors who were worried that the verdict could spark violence in Chicago. Rep. Danny Davis, a Chicago Democrat, stopped by the church to endorse the pastors' message.

"Look, let's be cool," Davis said. "Tearing up the neighborhood doesn't bring Trayvon Martin back."

The Rev. Moss began his comments about the Martin case Sunday by citing Jeremiah 31:15: "A voice is heard in Ramah / lamentation and bitter weeping. / Rachel is weeping for her children; / she refuses to be comforted for her children / because they are no more."

He then paraphrased it to talk about the Martin family's loss, praising members of the family for carrying themselves "with the utmost dignity."

Moss also said the Zimmerman trial was about more than race and murder. He criticized gun laws "supported and funded by NRA lobbyists" and criticized Florida's "stand your ground" law.

After Moss' son asked him about Martin's fate, the two discussed injustice. As they talked, the 12-year-old began drawing pictures he'd seen on the Internet of Martin with his arms around civil rights icon Emmett Till, to whom some have compared Martin.

There might be a "great lesson" in the child's artwork for everyone, Moss told the congregation.

"Maybe we are called to draw. Not to get angry but to draw," Moss said. "Create a new world."

Obama calls for peace

SANFORD, Fla. President Obama called for calm Sunday after the acquittal of George Zimmerman in the shooting death of unarmed black teenager Trayvon Martin, as thousands of civil rights demonstrators turned out at rallies to condemn racial profiling.

Zimmerman, cleared late Saturday by a Florida jury of six women, still faces public outrage, a possible civil suit and demands for a federal investigation.

With civil rights activists clamoring for federal civil rights charges, the U.S. Justice Department said it was evaluating whether it has enough evidence to support prosecution of Zimmerman in federal court after his acquittal in Florida.

Zimmerman's lawyers argued he acted in self-defense the night of Feb. 26, 2012, when, they say, Martin attacked Zimmerman inside a gated community in the central Florida town of Sanford.

They accuse civil rights advocates of wrongly injecting the issue of race.

"It was such a shame. The whole case nearly destroyed George from Day 1. ... That they put a racism spin on this prosecution just hurt him very deeply," said John Donnelly, a close friend of Zimmerman who testified in the trial.

Critics contend Zimmerman, 29, who is white and Hispanic, wrongly suspected Martin, 17, of being a criminal because he was black. Zimmerman called police to report a suspicious-looking person, then left his car with a fully loaded Kel Tec 9mm pistol concealed in his waistband.

A fight ensued in which Zimmerman suffered a bloody nose and head injuries, and Zimmerman shot Martin once in the heart.

The teenager had no criminal record and was staying in the neighborhood at the home of his father's fiancee.

He had been walking back from a convenience store where he had bought candy and a drink.

Thousands of protesters chanting "No justice, no peace" gathered in New York City on Sunday to protest the acquittal, which prompted rallies across the country.

Saturday's not-guilty verdict was decried by civil rights leaders and protests were organized in several more cities, including Boston, San Francisco, San Diego and Sacramento.

Obama, who once said, "If I had a son, he'd look like Trayvon," called for a peaceful response to a case that polarized the public from the beginning, raising issues of racial profiling and gun control.

"We are a nation of laws and a jury has spoken,"

Obama said in a statement. "I now ask every American to respect the call for calm reflection from two parents who lost their young son."

If found guilty of the most serious charge of second-degree murder, Zimmerman could have faced life in prison. Instead, the jury cleared him of that charge and of manslaughter, which could have resulted in a 30-year sentence.

Petition: Shield third rail

Family seeks changes to CTA's third rail in wake of Glenview man's death

By Tracy Swartz | REDEVE

The family of a man who died from electrocution last month after he accidentally touched the third rail at a North Side CTA station has started an online petition asking the CTA to put up protection along the third rail to prevent similar incidents.

The change.org petition posted by Eileen Johnson of Naperville on Thursday garnered more than 1,400 signatures as of Friday afternoon. Johnson's nephew, Jeff La Valle, died June 30 after he fell onto the tracks at the Howard Street station in Rogers Park.

La Valle, 26, and two siblings were headed home to Glenview after visiting the Pride Parade on the North Side.

According to a police report, the siblings were jokingly pushing each other on the platform when Jeff La Valle fell onto the tracks and touched the third rail. His twin brother, Justin La Valle, jumped onto the tracks in an attempt to save to him and was shocked as well.

Jeff La Valle was taken to St. Francis Hospital in Evanston, where he was pronounced dead at 8:08 p.m., according to the police report.

and say Jeff La Valle fell as he sidestepped crowds on the platform. The CTA said the platform was not crowded.

Johnson is asking the CTA to put protection around the third rail, which supplies power to propel trains, and work on crowd control after large-scale events.

"[The CTA] needs to make the public aware of the dangers of the third rail," Johnson said. "I just know something needs to be done."

Six riders died last year after coming in contact with the third rail, the CTA said. Two people have died this year-La Valle and a California man who fell onto the tracks at the Addison Red Line stop June 7.

CTA spokesman Brian Steele said the third rail sits more than 8 feet from the edge of the platform, and has to be exposed in order for the trains to operate.

Steele added that the agency has been planning to unveil a public safety campaign this fall about the dangers of being on CTA

Justin La Valle, who said he regularly rides Metra and infrequently rides the CTA, said he was unaware of the existence of a third rail until his brother's death last month.

"Let's find solutions," La Valle said. "I just don't want anyone to be hurt again."

'Glee' star dead at 31

VANCOUVER, Canada Canadian actor Cory Monteith, 31-year-old heartthrob of Fox's musical comedy television series "Glee," was found dead Saturday in his Vancouver hotel room, police said.

Police and paramedics found no signs of foul play and the cause of death was not clear, British Columbia Chief Coroner Lisa Lapointe said at a news conference.

Monteith had talked openly about struggles with substance abuse, and in April he completed voluntary treatment for unspecified substance addiction at a rehab facility. He also had been treated in a facility at age 19.

Asked whether Monteith had died of a drug overdose, Vancouver Police Department Acting Chief Doug LePard said he would "not discuss anything that we might have found in the room at this time."

On the hit series "Glee," Monteith played Finn Hudson, a high school football player turned enthusiastic singer in the glee club, or vocal group.

The actor grew up in Victoria, British Columbia, and told Parade magazine in 2011 about what he called a serious drug problem during his teenage years, for which he received treatment.

Other people were in Monteith's Pacific Rim Hotel room Friday night but evidence, including fob key entries, indicated he returned to his room by himself early Saturday and was alone when he died, police said. He was due to check out of the hotel later that

The actor had been dead for several hours when his body was discovered by police and paramedics answering an emergency call, Lapointe said.

The death of a young person is a tragedy for their family, friends and community," Lapointe said. 'A sudden death is more shocking and our hearts go out to the family and friends who are mourning the loss of this young man."

JAMMIN' KASPER

Despite the fact that Len Kasper plays Wrigley Field 81 times a year, the Cubs play-by-play broadcaster said he hasn't given die-hard Cubs fan and Pearl Jam frontman Eddie Vedder any tips ahead of his show Friday.

"I don't think I could give Eddie any tips about performing at all," Kasper said with a laugh. "He's one of the best who ever lived. I know that this will be a very special weekend for him coming up because he is such a huge Cubs fan."

For as much as he loves his job, the 42-year-old is equally passionate about Chicago's music scene.

"A lot of times I'll plan on going to a show after a day game," Kasper said. "Then we have a day game the next day and all of a sudden it's like 8 o'clock and I can barely keep my eyes open."

Kasper said he's only able to make it to about three to four shows during the season due to his schedule. When he does make it out, he says he largely goes unnoticed.

*Sometimes if I'm at Schubas or Metro or Double Door occasionally people will say hey," he said. "They're very nice; they say 'we enjoy what you do' or 'why are you a fan of this band?' I've made a lot of friends in the music community here which is really, really cool for me."

Like Cubs president Theo Epstein, Kasper is a musician away from Wrigley Field. So who's the better rocker of the two?

"Theo's a pretty good guitar player," Kasper said. "I just doodle around on the bass a little bit, try to pick three-chord songs that are easy. He's good. He knows his stuff; he's a good rock and roll guy." -ML

By Matt Lindner | FORREDEVE

Cubs TV play-by-play man Len Kasper loves his job, but the music aficionado says it comes with one major drawback.

"I'm gonna miss a lot of great shows this summer, including The Replacements reunion in September," the 42-year-old said. "I'm trying to figure out how to get back from Pittsburgh. We go from Pittsburgh to Milwaukee on that Sunday night, so I'm trying to figure out a way to make a detour to Chicago to check out the reunion because I will be really bummed if I miss it."

But while he misses a lot of shows he'd like to see, Kasper never misses a game because, much like the team's fan base, he loves spending summers at Wrigley Field.

"It never gets old," he said. "It feels like if you just close your eyes, this could be the end of September. That's a very special quality about this place that a lot of other places don't have. When the Cubs win, that day feels like a World Series game."

Now in his ninth season in the team's booth, Kasper has adjusted well to life with new partner Jim "JD" Deshaies.

"He's got a lot of Bob Brenly's sensibilities," Kasper said (Brenly was his former longtime TV partner). *They played in kind of a similar era. [Deshaies is] really interested in the new-school stats. He's on FanGraphs every day, so that kind of fits my personality and kind of allows us to go down many different avenues."

"I think we've both done it for a good long while now and we have similar styles and approaches to broadcasting," Deshaies added. We just blended very nicely early on."

The mood swings in the stands at Wrigley can be sudden and violent depending on the team's fortunes. But Kasper says you'll never see that in the booth, regardless of how bad the product is on the field.

"As you have the roller-coaster ride of the season, the announcers kind of provide that comfort zone when people tune in," he said. "You learn over the course of time when you do this for a while that it is a long season."

It's that mentality that has helped Kasper establish himself as the polar opposite of his White Sox counterpart, the bombastic Ken "Hawk" Harrelson.

"When you're winning, the team and the way they're playing kind of carries everything and the momentum," he said. "When you're losing, I think it's nice to know that there's something you can count on every day when you turn on a game that 'oh, OK, that's Len and JD, they're doing their thing."

"I think fans want an honest broadcast and if a guy's struggling, you tell them that a guy's struggling," Deshaies added. "They don't want to hear us sit up here and whine."

Of course, it also helps that the pair is joined nightly by a steady stream of celebrity guests to mix things up. When asked about his favorites, Kasper doesn't hesitate.

"Jeff Garlin, [whom] we had [Wednesday] night is always fun and unpredictable," he said. "My face hurt I was laughing so hard after he left the booth. Eddie Vedder is great. He's a huge baseball fan, loves the Cubs. The Chicago celebrities, Joe Mantegna, Bonnie Hunt, any celebrity from Chicago who grew up rooting for the Cubs is really really good."

Having been in the booth longer than just about any other player has been in the Cubs dugout, Kasper knows a thing or two about Wrigley. Which is why, when the team announced plans to add a Jumbo Tron, he wasn't as upset as some who speculated that such an As you have the roller coast-

As you have the roller coaster of the season, the announcers kind of provide that comfort zone when people tune in."

addition would be too drastic.

"When I look at the ballpark, there have been changes over the year, but to me it still has the same vibe as it had when I first came here over 20 years ago," he said. "I don't think it will ruin the aesthetic of this ballpark in any way."

THEY'RE ON DECK

Cubs broadcaster Len Kasper said there's a number of local bands that are on the verge of doing big things beyond the Windy City. Here are some of his favorites:

"There's a great singer named Jennifer Hall. She's starting to tour outside of the city a little bit more. I would definitely check her out when she's here in Chicago."

- "The Steepwater Band, they've been around for a while and they're starting to get some national recognition. They tour a lot, Great blues band."
- "The Handcuffs, big fan of The Handcuffs."

"Scott Lucas and his new band The Married Men. Scott's from Local H, and I really like his new band."

"Jason Narducy, who plays with Bob Mould, [He's all great bass player. He has a new band called Split Single. I haven't seen them live yet, but I've heard some of their songs. Real good power pop, and I think they've got a chance to be really big."

No nudes yet for Danica

NASCAR driver Danica Patrick might someday go nude for ESPN The Magazine's "body issue," She just isn't ready to take it all off yet. "I might change my mind one year," she told reporters. And it might be something that parallels something else I'm doing, or where I'm at, or how I'm feeling. But just not right now."

Down goes Hernandez

According to The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer, the Pro Football Hall of Fame has removed a photo of former New England tight end Aaron Hernandez after receiving complaints. The photo depicts Hernandez high-stepping into the end zone in 2010. Hernandez is charged with murdering 27-yearold semi-pro football player Odin Lloyd.

THE DIGIT 15 FEET

That's the approximate distance Carly Rae Jepsen's first pitch traveled before Sunday's Tampa Bay Rays game. Mind you, home plate is 60 feet, 6 inches away from the pitcher's mound. And her attempt wasn't even online.

Shedd expert: Sharknado wouldn't be that scary

By Mick Swasko | REDEYE

If a tornado carrying multiple varieties of sharks actually did find its way to Los Angeles, the sharks wouldn't be angry. They would be incredibly confused.

"To be up in a tornado, I don't think they would have the cognitive desire to go after people at that point," said George Parsons, senior director of fishes at Shedd Aquarium, when asked about the premise of SyFy's campy movie "Sharknado," which premiered Thursday.

For the uninitiated, here's the film's basic premise: A hurricane hits the West Coast, sucking up sharks and plopping them on land in L.A. A conveniently timed tornado then hurls them upward, where they begin chomping their way through the city.

First thing first, Parsons says: Don't vilify the species, people.

"Sharks definitely don't deserve their reputation as being man-eaters," Parsons said. "They are really necessary and important animals to oceans and reefs."

Parsons—a B-movie buff who has been with the Shedd for 25 years—said he saw a trailer for the flick and assumed it was a joke. He hasn't seen the whole thing, but watched enough of it to set the record straight during a cheeky interview Friday.

Spoilers ahead: Don't read on if you plan on catching Syfy's encore at 6 p.m. Thursday.

Take, for example, the movie's climax, in which our hero Fin (Ian Ziering) is swallowed whole by a Great White and then uses a chainsaw to cut his way out.

No way, Parsons said.

"It really has to do with [the shark's] bite radius," he said. "A really big shark, a record-size shark, would probably not have the mouth span to swallow a human whole and get it into their digestive system. It would have to be a shark bigger than we've ever seen. That's a premise I would have to myth-bust, definitely."

So, how long would a shark last out of water?

"I would imagine a shark out of water, with their gills wet, 10 minutes tops," he said. And that's in normal circumstances. After being flung through a tornado, Parsons imagines, a shark would last a much shorter period of time.

The bottom line? Sharks that just survived flights in two different natural disasters aren't going to be very dangerous when they land. If he found himself in a hypothetical Sharknado, Parsons wouldn't panic.

"I'd probably run inside and get my camera and go back outside, see how many I could catch," he said. "Doing what I do, I would get a pickup truck and try to get them back to the ocean."

Aisha Tyler gets down to business

Los Angeles Times

Aisha Tyler was only half-joking when she nicknamed herself "the black female Ryan Seacrest." But her upcoming schedule might make even the omnipresent "American Idol" host and media mogul want to take a

"When I'm more prolific, I'm more creative, I'm more engaged," she said in her Radford Studios dressing room outside a recent taping of "The Talk." "When I have free time, I tend to drift. But 15,000 jobs might be the limit."

Never mind that she's a good juggler and a multi-talented multi-hyphenate performer. Tyler might just be otherworldly, joked "Archer" executive producer Matt Thompson. He speculated that Tyler's actually from a place called "Hardworkistan," not San Francisco, and that she represents "humanity 2.0."

"She's prettier and taller and smarter than we are-the collective we, as in the American public—has funnier things to say, reads way more books," Thompson said in a phone call from his Atlanta production offices. "She may be a robot. If lasers come shooting out of her eyes some day, I'll be the one saying, 'Called it!'"

Lipstick resurrection?

Los Angeles Times

Don't you just hate it when your favorite shade of lipstick disappears?

Now there's good news for those grieving the loss of Tomango, the reddish-orange M.A.C. shade that saw its glory days more than 20 years ago, or Pink Poodle, the fuchsiapink that came out around the beginning of the millennium.

M.A.C. by Request is planning to bring back some classic 1990s lipsticks and eye shadows for a second run. And the company is asking its Facebook friends to help.

Through July 21, you can go to the M.A.C. by Request Facebook page to vote on which three lipsticks and three eye shadows you'd like to have in your beauty bag. There are six lipstick shades and five eye shadows to choose from, and you can vote for one shade in each category each day through the end of the contest.

The winning shades will be reissued (and available for purchase) next spring.

Have some favorites that aren't in consideration? M.A.C. invites you to start your own campaign by tweeting your top choices using #MACBYREOUEST.

Spotify's 10 most misquoted songs

There's no bathroom on the right, and Jimi Hendrix never asked to be excused so he could kiss a dude. And, no, no matter how blinded by the light you may have been, you weren't wrapped up like ... a feminine hygiene product.

But all those are among the world's most frequently misquoted song lyrics—at least accord-

The popular music-streaming service conducted an unscientific poll to find the most commonly botched lines from popular songs. Of course, nobody had to fess up to getting the words wrong themselves. The poll, of 1,042 people, asked for the songs they most commonly hear other people singing incorrectly.

ROMANCE PLANET

Cancer June 22-July 22 With Mercury going direct in your sign, you'll feel calm about love matters. If you're in a relationship, you'll know that things are going to work out. If you're single, you'll be more patient about waiting to meet that soulmate. Good for you.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

A sassy moon is making you eager for attention. You'll walk into a club wearing your sexiest outfit, commanding everyone to focus on you and worship you.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22 With Mercury finally going direct, your sanity will return. Finally you'll realize that one-night stand you had with somebody hot wasn't a real relationship. You went a little crazy during Mercury retrograde, but now your brains are back in action.

Libra Sept 23-Oct. 23 Love feels weird right now, thanks to Venus. You're kinda sorta interested in somebody. but you don't feel a strong sense of connection. It's OK to be honest. Don't continue a relationship if it's just not meant to be.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21 The moon in your sign is putting you in a good mood, for once. You're not freaking out because your girlfriend is still trying to

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21 A sexy friend could express interest in becoming something more. You have so much going on that this might not be the best time to start a new romance. Then again, this person is incredibly hot. Hmmm.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19 With so many planets opposite your sign, just take a nap. Tell everybody that you're not home. you're not available, and you're just not interested. You won't be in a good place to make major decisions about life and love for another few weeks.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18 You know that person you were involved with ages ago? The one you still fantasize about? He or she could resurface. This does not mean that you should get back together.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Mars is reminding you that you don't have to settle. If you've been dating someone who is annoying, rude or smelly, it could be time to send him or her packing. Don't stay stuck in a situation that is dragging you down.

Aries March 21-April 19 Don't let your hormones make major decisions for you. The moon is opposite your sign, so it's likely that you'll fall madly in love with a stranger or decide that that crazy, abusive and/or unemployed ex is the love of your life. Chill out.

Taurus April 20-May 20 Sometimes you worry far too much about what other people think about you. The sun has you fretting about how your parents.

friends or coworkers are judging your romantic relationship. You do know that their opinion doesn't matter, don't you?

Gemini May 21-June 21 The moon is making you restless and you could seek instant satisfaction in the arms of somebody unpleasant. Don't elope with a guy who just got out of prison.

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

MICHAEL PENA'S NOT THE BEST BOWLER. BUT HE'S HOPING TO SCORE WITH 'TURBO'

For a guy who rarely goes bowling and is content with breaking 100 on the score sheet, Michael Pena-best known for his roles in "Crash" and "End of Watch"-sure carried himself like a big shot on the lanes July 8. But it was all in good fun, other than the fact that Pena really wanted to win.

"Are you nervous?" asked Pena, 37, before the first of our two embarrassingly low-scoring games at Lucky Strike Lanes in Streeterville. "I feel like you're nervous."

In addition to red and black shoes, the Chicago native was sporting a pompadour he said was for the WWII film "Fury" with Brad Pitt (his "Babel" co-star) and Shia LaBeoufas well as the same black pants and button-down shirt he'd been wearing all day while promoting his animated film, "Turbo," in theaters Wednesday.

Pena screened "Turbo"-about a snail that races in the Indianapolis 500 with the help of a taco stand employee (voiced by Pena)-at Showplace Icon on July 7 for friends and family, including his 5-year-old son, Roman. Like so many other actors who lend their voices to animated films. Pena said he got involved in the movie because he wanted his son to enjoy his work for once.

"I remember I used to think my dad was really cool working at a factory. He used to make buttons. I used to brag, 'This button here, My dad made it.' There was this sense of pride. It's knowing your dad is doing something cool. What's cooler than to be in [Roman's] favorite movies?"

Pena followed his more unsuccessful frames with four-letter words and his occasional strikes and spares with either jubilation ("Daddy's getting in on it," he boasted at one point) or exaggerated nonchalance ("Anyway, what were you saying?"). It might have been a blessing that the heavy rain that day forced us to cancel our mini-golf plans and bowl instead; otherwise Pena, an avid golfer, would have made it a really long day for this columnist.

Pena said his love of golf is the most Hollywood thing about him and isn't the sort of hobby you would expect from someone raised by Mexican parents in the North Lawndale area across from Douglas Park. And because his family members are so far removed from Hollywood, they do have a tendency to let their inner fan come out on occasion.

"I remember my brother called me up at 3 in the morning L.A. time and said, 'Mike, I really need you to call me back," Pena said. "I was like 'Whoa, whoa, whoa.' (He said) 'Mike, I need Nicolas Cage's number. He's in town, and I want to have a beer with him. 'This is when I did 'World Trade Center' with him. I was like, 'Don't call me with this' and hung up on him."
